I am a graduate in the computer information systems field and looking for a position in the IT industry. I am interested in mobile and web design and development.

I have held executive director and project management positions which allowed me to develop various skills such as:

- Critical Thinking
- Communication
- Creativity
- Inclusive Leadership
- Learning Agility

In addition to the skills learned from management positions, I have also developed other technical skills:

- Project Analysis
- Project Planning & Implementation
- Research
- Strategy Design
- Budget Management
- Troubleshooting

My decision to enter the IT field was sparked by a creative solution I devised for a problem in my previous industry. This initial foray into app development revealed a passion for IT and problem-solving.

Recognizing the transformative power of technology, I pursued an education in software and mobile development, acquiring two degrees, a diploma, and three certifications.

The analytical and management skills from my past roles now enrich my IT expertise, forming a unique blend poised for impact in a new arena. I am excited to contribute this wealth of experience to your esteemed company.

Thank you for taking the time to consider me for this position and I hope to hear from you soon!
